Dr. Ludovic Bouland decided that, given the theme, it would be apt to wrap the book in…

"The presentation of skin in medical and anatomical illustration is not new, but the use of skin in medical education and research is relatively recent," Rosenbloom said. "The use of human skin in medical education and research is a relatively recent phenomenon, and it is only in the last few decades that scientists have begun to use human skin as a method of teaching and research."